

ATENEIO PONTIFICIO
REGINA APOSTOLORUM

Cattedra Marco Arosio
di Alti Studi Medievali

Facoltà di Filosofia / Philosophy Faculty

Convegno Internazionale

International Conference

Natural Law in Medieval Philosophy: Traditions, Convergences and Divergences

* Miniatura raffigurante greci, latini, ebrei e musulmani nella Palermo del sec. XII, dal Liber ad honorem Augusti di Pietro da Eboli, c.1197, Folio 98r

Medieval thinkers have developed natural law theory significantly and exerted an enduring influence on subsequent reflection. While the contribution of the Latin tradition of medieval thought has been widely studied, there is a growing number of studies on the natural law theory of the Byzantine, Jewish, and Islamic traditions. The conference will consider to what extent the various medieval traditions of natural law concur or differ, and on what grounds. It shall also consider whether they contain theoretical resources for addressing contemporary concerns about natural law.

Con la partecipazione di

Anver M. Emon (University of Toronto); Dominic Farrell (Pontifical Athenaeum Regina Apostolorum, Rome);
Jonathan Jacobs (John Jay College, New York); Riccardo Saccenti (University of Bologna);
George Zografidis (Aristotle University of Thessaloniki)

Roma, 10-11 aprile 2018

Aula Master